How we retired in 15 years with $300 a month

"We look like sailors from way back, don't we? But, until we retired, the only knots Kaye and I knew about were the ones we tied ourselves into worrying about money!

"In 1950, we began to wonder about the future. I remember the day because it was my fortieth birthday. It was snowing. I said to Kaye: 'I wish we lived in Florida!'

"'Oh! That reminds me,' Kaye said. 'There's something I want you to read.' Maybe you can guess the rest. The Phoenix Mutual ad Kaye had saved showed a couple retired and living in Florida, just 15 years after they'd started their plan. Sounded good to me, so I sent the coupon in next day. Less than a month later, we were all signed up.

"Talk about smooth sailing! Here we are retired, with the security of $300 a month guaranteed for life."

You, too, can plan to have an income of from $50 to $300 a month or more, if you start early enough. Send the coupon and receive by mail a free booklet on this and other plans.

■ In the past 12 months, Edward R. Murrow died, Robert E. Kintner was fired and Fred Friendly resigned. Thus did television lose the three men most responsible for shaping its coverage of the news—the thing television does best.

Murrow left CBS in 1961; but his influence was felt so long as Fred Friendly, his partner and co-producer, was there to battle for more time and more money for news programs. Together these two brought controversy to television and gave it stature.

■ Murrow was the man on camera, the one who won praise and brickbats, for such courageous programs as the one which attacked Sen. Joe McCarthy. Friendly was the man behind the camera who planned the programs with Murrow, then was responsible for getting them ready for the air.

He continued as executive producer of CBS Reports after Murrow left, eventually became president of CBS News. A few weeks ago he got into an argument with the business office—John A. Schneider, new head of CBS's broadcast divisions—over which of them was to decide whether a news story was big enough to be worth preempting regular programming (and regular advertising income). It's a basic conflict in all news media. To complicate matters, the newspapers publicized the battle. Friendly could knuckle under or resign. He resigned.

■ Bob Kintner was president of NBC—head of the business office—and he was a news man. As a news man he decided it was necessary to pre-empt commercial programming to cover a news event. As president of the network he okayed the decision. Kintner's determination to cover the news thoroughly and his success in building a fine news organization gave NBC news leadership for years—leadership challenged only recently by Friendly.

I Dream of Jeannie

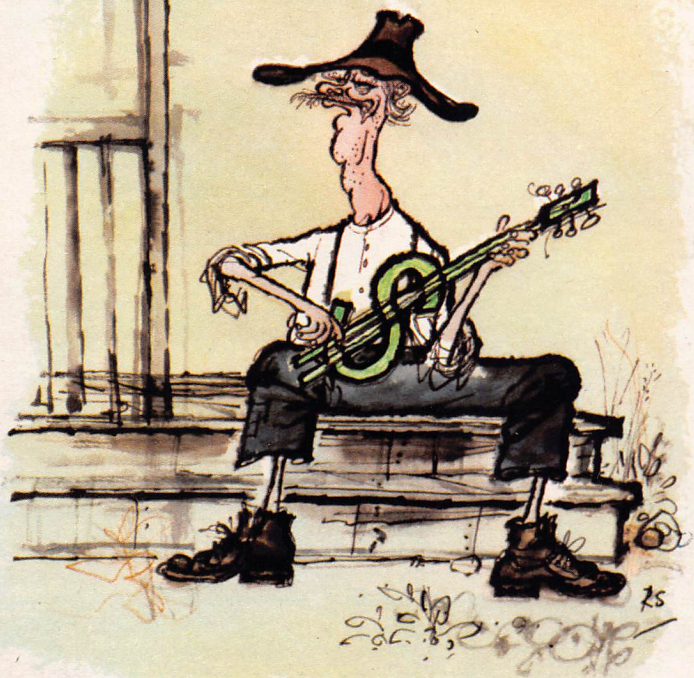

We'll tell you frankly that we approached this NBC answer to ABC's Bewitched with the feeling that it was going to be, at best, a zephyr on your soft TV air. But we now wish to say that once you're over the main idea—which is that a young astronaut named Tony (Larry Hagman) has uncorked, on a desert island, a strange-looking bottle out of which pops, from prime time to prime time, a 2500-year-old genie named Jeannie—well, as we say, once you're over this, you're home free. For the fact is that this show, which is only moderately well acted and directed, has at least three redeeming features.

For one thing, Jeannie (Barbara Eden) is a very good-looking girl for 2500. For another, she is capable of all the special-effects legerdemain which is so in demand by the followers of both Bewitched and this show. (Incidentally, they can't do these in color yet—so that's why Jeannie, whose hair, at least, should be light brown, is all black and white.) For a third thing, this show occasionally gets into real satire. Since Tony can make Jeannie go back in the bottle any time he doesn't want her around, she obviously would make the ideal wife. Tony's buddy astronaut, Roger (Bill Daily), is always swiping Jeannie and in one episode wants to marry her. Tony warns him against it. "Your friends will turn on you," he says. "Their wives will hate you. Do you think they're going to watch her treat you with kindness and understanding and compassion? Do you think they'll let her destroy everything they stand for?"

Jeannie herself also has several redeeming, if not always winning, features—and not the least of these is the fact that she doesn't always win. She loves her "master" very much but she is also extremely jealous of him—and this gives the writers a field day, not only with their plots but also with their domestic scenes. "I'll turn her into a pillar of salt," Jeannie will say of one of Tony's old girl friends who shows up. "You do," replies Tony, "and I'll pour ink in your bottle." All in all, Jeannie may be a genie but her genes are all female and she's no ingénue. When, for example, Tony refuses to marry her, she asks, "Why not? I'm single." To which Tony replies, "You! Why, you've been single for 2500 years!" "That's just it," wails Jeannie. "I don't want to be an old maid." Finally, Jeannie has a delightful streak of just plain mischievousness—and this, combined with her legerdemain, not only makes life miserable for all the men—Tony, Roger and especially their long-suffering base psychologist (Hayden Rorke)—but also makes I Dream of Jeannie bearable for the rest of us. In one episode in Bagdad she even sets off, by mistake, the burglar alarm in the thieves' market. See what we mean? A genie—but no genius.

AN ENGLISH COSMOPOLITE SAVORS AMERICAN CORN

In Paris, where I live, the American Western is considered one of the fine arts. A dress shop, with appropriate decor, may be called "Ranch," a bar may be hung with saddles and pistols, and the jeunesse wouldn't continued be seen dead in anything but "louees"—Levi's, to you. The West is also approximate. Somewhere beyond New Jersey. Whether the Clam-petts come from the Ozarks instead of "Sant-Fe" is all one to the French.

And what could be more "Westairn" than Beverly Hills—short of actually falling into the Pacific.

Although I know this to be untrue. I have failed to discourage it. Hitherto we in Paris have been under the Ligne Grand-mère Clampett," I shall not disclaim responsibility. All because I went to Hollywood to talk to Granny.

"Hi, pardner," I said.

"Cut out the pesky compliments, young man," said Granny, saucily crossing her size-18 boots and lifting her skirt two inches out of the cigar butts that littered the stage around her chair. "You're after my money, like the rest of them critters."

I did my best to look blameless and surreptitiously slid the Gladstone bag I had brought along just in case, under the nearest pile of kindling.

She rose to her feet. Towering below me she looked more like an apprentice diver with each foot in a row boat than a female representative of the Clampett millions. Was this the face that had launched a billion tons of assorted sponsored foodstuffs? Granny Clampett! The toast of the civilized world.

"Get movin'," she said graciously, and led me to the kitchen for a slap-up home-cooked meal of hominy grits and red-eye gravy. . . .

Several days later, when I was feeling better again, I thought I would have another try at getting something notable on paper about this Beverly Hillbillies phenomenon, even if it meant tackling Granny a second time.

The trouble with the Clampett family is that fiction will take over where fact should rear its ugly head. Here, acclaimed by multitudes, is a delightful cast of stalwarts: two of them veterans of the stage and two of them innocents in actors' clothing, who, like the Clampetts they portray, have struck oil and fame beyond modest dreams. By normal standards their rustic program should have been strangled at birth. And yet they have achieved the thing for which many an alchemist sold his soul to the devil: the transmutation of base metal into gold. Golden corn to be specific.

overwhelming domination of "Annie du Far-West" ("Annie Get Your Gun," to be exact). Now I am in a position to offer personal contact with her replacement. If Dior drops knee-length boots this winter in favour of "La been tossed at the Beverly Hillbillies in many languages the world over. I cannot recall offhand the Japanese for corn, but I would stake my meeting with Granny that the charge has been leveled at the program in many highly colored picturegrams. However, the Clampetts are still running way up top on Tokyo TV and, no doubt, in Hong Kong and Hanover. You name it, they probably have it in their rustic bucket.

Braver men than I have tried to fathom the success of this comic strip from the backwoods. But fathoming is not important. What is important is that, in every nook and cranny in the United States where men and women are assembled together, millions of dreams are realized through the Clampetts. Week after week harmless citizens wish themselves into the boots of Granny and Jed and Elly May and Jethro. Fortunately they are well occupied, and a nicer bunch you couldn't wish to meet.

How YOU can bring in those

UHF stations

Some easy ways to convert your set to receive all channels

BY DAVID LACHENBRUCH

*I*s your television set delivering all the channels? If it's more than one-and-a-half years old, it probably isn't. However, a low-cost accessory which you can install yourself can add UHF channels to your set and expand your viewing horizons.

Most major metropolitan areas now have one or more stations broadcasting on the UHF—ultra-high frequency—channels, 14 through 83. More than 150 UHF stations are now on the air, and a new one starts up about every two weeks. All television sets built since April 1964 are equipped to receive UHF channels, as a result of the Federal all-channel law, whose aim is to encourage expansion of TV broadcasting. In areas where UHF stations are on the air, owners of these all-channel sets can enjoy additional program fare—both commercial and educational.

It's not necessary to buy a new all-channel set to pick up these new stations. A "converted" set actually can bring them in every bit as well.

The do-it-yourself type of conversion is the simplest, but there are two other ways to adapt your set to capture those UHF signals. They both require a service technician and some internal surgery on your set. Their advantage is neatness—no external gadgets. They're possible on some sets, but not all. They are:

(1) Internal all-channel conversion, generally possible only on sets built between 1962 and mid-1964. These sets can be identified by a "UHF" position on the channel selector. Conversion kits usually are available from the manufacturer, through the dealer who originally sold the set. The installation includes a UHF tuning dial, which replaces a removable panel on the set. Conversion kits usually cost from about $25 continued to $35, plus installation.

(2) "Channel strip" conversion, which can be attempted only on sets having "turret tuners" (your dealer can tell you if yours is eligible). Individual elements, one for each UHF channel in the area, are installed in the tuner in place of unused VHF channels. The cost is about $10 to $15 per channel, including installation. This type of conversion is recommended for sets which have remote-control tuning, since it's the only method that lets you select several UHF, as well as VHF, stations with the wireless channel-change unit. It has its drawbacks, though. As new UHF stations go on the air, you must have additional strips installed. If you should move to another city, the channel strips in your set must be replaced with the proper ones for the channels in your new location.

The third method is the simplest, usually the least expensive, and the only one that will work on any set, regardless of make or vintage. If you're capable of such household jobs as replacing the plug on a lamp cord, you can do it yourself with no technical knowledge and without removing the back of the set. The only tool you need is a screwdriver. This is the use of an external UHF converter between the antenna and the TV set.

The converter looks like a small table radio, and can be placed atop the set or alongside it. There are several brands of converters, available at TV-appliance stores, department stores or electronic supply houses in areas where UHF stations are on the air. But before you buy any converter, it's a good idea to have a talk with your dealer.

Every television set requires an antenna, whether it's a built-in, a rabbit-ear or an outside installation. Because UHF stations transmit on far higher frequencies than VHF stations, your regular VHF antenna won't work for UHF, except in very rare cases. What type of UHF antenna you'll need will depend on the distance between your home and the stations, the power of the stations, and the type of terrain or obstacles between your home and the stations. Your TV dealer should be able to give you a preliminary idea of how much antenna you'll need.

You may do well by starting out with the built-in loop antenna which comes with most makes of converters. There are other types of indoor UHF and VHF-UHF antennas, at prices from about $1.50 to $15. If you have an outdoor VHF antenna, a UHF element usually can be added.

Because you really can't be sure exactly what you'll need, it's important to buy both converter and any indoor antenna with an exchange or return privilege. If you live in a "strong signal" area, it's best to start at the bottom, with the least expensive converter and/or antenna, working upward if these aren't satisfactory.

Use transistors, like sets

Like the UHF tuners in modern TV sets (and unlike some internal conversion kits for older sets), most converters use efficient, long-life transistors in place of tubes. Each converter manufacturer usually offers two models—a single-transistor version for close-in "metropolitan" areas, and a two-transistor job for fringes. List prices generally are $29.95 and $39.95, respectively, but sometimes you can find them discounted for considerably less. Remember, it's a good idea to start out with the single-transistor unit—but with that all-important exchange privilege.

If the built-in loop antenna, or a more de-luxe indoor antenna, doesn't do the trick, you'll have to have an outdoor UHF element installed. But even if you do end up with a professional antenna installation, you usually can save by buying and hooking up the converter yourself.

All UHF converters are installed in exactly the same way. You simply remove the antenna lead-in wire from the back of your TV set, and connect it to the similar terminals marked "VHF Antenna" on the back of your converter. A short strip of twin-lead wire, which comes with the converter, is then used to connect the converter's "TV Set" terminals to the set's antenna terminals, from which you have just removed the antenna wire.

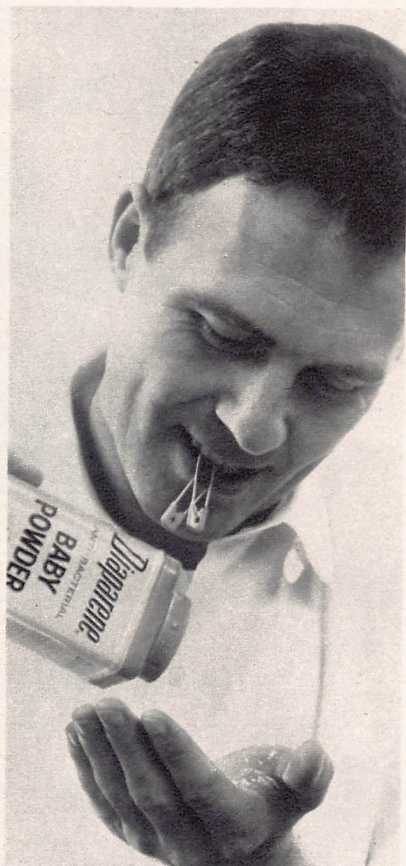

There's one more set of terminals on the back of the converter—marked "UHF Antenna." To these you connect the converter's loop antenna or any other UHF antenna.

When the wiring's done

After the wiring is completed, you simply plug the converter into a wall outlet (converters which operate from flashlight batteries don't even require this step). The converter usually has two controls—a VHF-UHF switch and a tuning knob. With the switch set to VHF, the converter is off and the signal from the VHF antenna is fed directly to the TV set; you tune channels 2 through 13 the usual way.

To receive UHF channels, you turn the channel selector on your TV set to channel 5 or 6 (whichever is unused in your area). Then you turn the converter switch to UHF and dial the station you wish, using the converter for both coarse and fine tuning. The controls on your TV set—contrast, brightness and any color controls—are used in the normal manner.

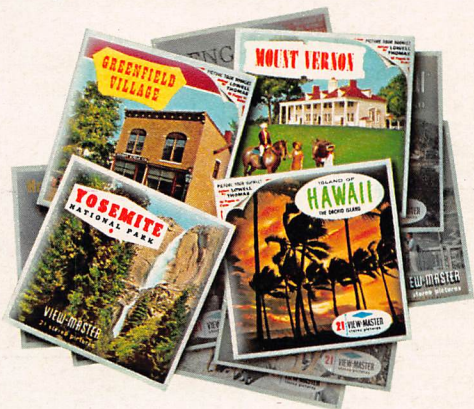

There's more to television than channels 2 to 13. UHF converters are now adding new channels to at least 6,000,000 television receivers. Conversion is easy and inexpensive—no TV set need be blind to the new channels now springing up across the U.S.A.

TV AND CIVILIZATION

I just finished Louis Kronenberger's assessment of TV and civilization ["Uncivilized and Uncivilizing," Feb. 26], and I am prompted to speculate upon the following: (1) In terms Mr. K. is talking about, there was probably no more advanced society in the 20th Century than pre-Nazi Germany. It was a society that burgeoned with concert halls, parks, beauty, exciting arts. It was, by Mr. K.'s romantic measure of "civilization," an ideal world. Lots of luck on that one. (2) The dream of a civilized society is just that—a dream. The plays from Aeschylus, for example, remind us of the glory that was Greece. What we don't have are the texts of the satyr plays, whose standards fall somewhere between night life at Hugh Hefner's pad and a heated-up version of "Godzilla." (3) We are not a gentle society most of the time, and TV reflects this. We are pretty much prone to wasting time, and TV helps us do it. And we care about things and money. But we were this before TV came along.

'MICHELANGELO'

Congratulations to NBC for "Michelangelo: The Last Giant." Perhaps only the 15th Century could produce a Michelangelo, but at least the 20th Century has brought him now to all of us. Surely, this is what television is for.

'16 IN WEBSTER GROVES'

FOR THE RECORD

Valedictory: The formalities of Robert E. Kintner's still unexplained departure from NBC were completed last week, with the release of a letter of resignation written by Kintner. He will relinquish the chairmanship of NBC officially on March 31. The letter was something of a valedictory address. Kintner looked back over the accomplishments of his nine years at NBC and recommended some courses of action for his successors, Walter D. Scott and Julian Goodman.

In entertainment programming, he called for more experimentation, more specials and a greater readiness "from time to time to sacrifice over-all rating leadership in favor of an increasing number of dramatic entertainment programs dealing with controversial social, economic and political problems." As for television news, Kintner advocated increased coverage of "controversial subjects," more "intelligent interpretation," and eventual expansion of the nightly half-hour network newscasts to a full hour.

Surprise Shift: On the heels of the Kintner resignation, which was a foregone conclusion, came another executive change that was a surprise to nearly everybody in television: Edgar J. Scherick, ABC-TV's vice president in charge of programming, will give up that post April 1. Scherick says that he is resigning voluntarily, to set up his own TV-production firm. As there always is in such cases, however, there was a suspicion that Scherick was not going willingly, but rather was a casualty of the ratings war. He was the architect of this season's ABC schedule, which has proved to be slightly less solid in the ratings than those of the other networks and which will undergo substantial renovations next fall. The 41-year-old Scherick will be replaced by Leonard Goldberg, 32, who has been in charge of ABC's daytime programming, and less than a month ago was appointed West Coast programming chief for the network.

Obituaries: William Frawley, 73, who played Fred Mertz in Lucy shows for nine years, then joined the regular cast of My Three Sons, died March 3 in Hollywood, of a heart attack. . . . Alice Pearce, 47, Bewitched's Gladys Kravitz, succumbed to cancer in Los Angeles March 3. . . . Charles Von Fremd, 40, CBS news correspondent best known for his coverage of the White House and Cape Kennedy, died Feb. 25 in suburban Washington, of an apparent heart attack. . . . Jesse Zousmer, 54, vice president and director of TV news for ABC, was killed in a Tokyo plane crash March 4.

California and Pay-TV: It's small consolation to Sylvester L. Weaver and his stockholders in Subscription Television, Inc., but the California Supreme Court has declared that the state's ban on pay-TV is unconstitutional. In 1964 California's voters passed a referendum prohibiting pay-TV, and Weaver's company—which, on top of its legal problems, was in poor shape financially—was forced to close up shop.—Henry Harding

9:00 2 11 NCAA BASKETBALL

SPECIAL The championship game in the NCAA Western Regional Basketball Tournament is telecast live from Pauley Gymnasium on the UCLA campus.

At press time, the teams expected to meet in last night's semi-final action included Oregon State of the AAWU, University of the Pacific of the WCAC, University of Utah of the Western Athletic Conference and at large teams Texas Western and Colorado State.

Early season estimates saw the Regional finals as carbon copies of the last two years involving UCLA and USF, with the defending NCAA champion Bruins trying for an unprecedented third consecutive national title. Instead UCLA was slowed down by injuries and saw the ball-controlling Oregon State Beavers take over first place in the AAWU.

UOP, led by one of the Nation's top rebounders Keith Swagerty, beat USF twice in WCAC action. With only a weekend of action left in both leagues, UCLA and USF needed a miracle to tie Oregon State and UOP and force a playoff.

RETURN The Cleveland Indians meet the San Francisco Giants in an exhibition game at Phoenix, Ariz. This is the first of 19 live telecasts on Ch. 2, expanded this year to include games against each of the National League teams as well as all of the Dodger Stadium battles.

The Indians, managed by Birdie Tebbets, are one of the stronger teams in the American League with a solid pitching staff and the productive bats of Rockie Colavito, Leon Wagner and Fred Whitfield. Colavito led the league in RBI's with 108 and hit 26 home runs. Wagner had 28 homers and 79 RBI's; Whitfield, 26 and 90.

Herman Frank's Giants finished two games behind the World Champion Dodgers in 1965 and are taking dead aim on the 1966 National League pennant. The difference this year rests on the condition of Orlando Cepeda's knee and the performances of pitching acquisitions Lindy McDaniel and Joe Gibbon. Leading the Giants in the batting and pitching departments are 1965 National League MVP Willie Mays and 22-game winner Juan Marichal.

1/3 of the carpets we test are rejected

They don't meet 501* Certification Mark standards. What's the "501" Mark? It's like a diploma. Carpets must earn it. One third of those submitted for certification fail to make the grade.

How is it earned? Each carpet has to pass five tough Du Pont tests for quality: 1. The pile must be 100% Du Pont nylon—specifically engineered for durability and spot cleanability. 2. Pile weight must meet rigid standards. Too light? Out it goes. 3. The carpet must resist pilling and fuzzing. 4. Pale or intense, colors must resist fading through hours of exposure to direct sunlight. 5. The backing must be top quality for added strength and shape retention.

Many carpets do earn "501" certification. Together they represent the widest selection of styles and colors in man-made fibers. Prices range from $7.95 to $16.95 per square yard. There are different prices because several factors determine the cost of carpets certified "501": pile weight and density, fabric construction, styling, manufacturing know-how. A reputable dealer can help you select the best one for your needs.

But whatever you decide to pay, the "501" Certification Mark assures you of quality—and excellent value.

Du Pont makes fibers, not carpets

“Just months ago

all I could talk about
was babies and recipes

...then The National Observer came into our home, bringing fascinating new food for thought —and conversation—for the whole family.”

“Soon after Carol Sue was born, I found my whole life was absorbed by her. All I could think about was her needs. All I could talk about was babies and formulas and recipes.

“When friends dropped in, and the conversation turned to world affairs, or the new books and plays, I had absolutely nothing to say.

“Of course, I love my family and I wouldn't change places with anyone on earth. But I was beginning to feel very sorry for myself, so left out of things!

“Then I decided to take a friend's advice and set aside time for myself to catch up with the world. I subscribed to The National Observer. And it turned out to be just what the doctor ordered.

“Because The Observer is a weekly newspaper, it has time to explore the news in depth . . . and I have time to read it thoroughly. I get a clear picture of what's happening in the world and why. And not only does The Observer report on all the major news, it also has dozens of articles on fascinating news sidelights. For instance, items such as these:

. . . why a group of space scientists spent six months studying garbage disposal in California

. . . why one million pet dogs are stolen annually

. . . why we may someday learn by injection

. . . why 2,500 international lawyers hope to legislate world peace

. . . why churches in Virginia and Ohio are operating coffee houses

. . . why the people of Salt Lake City voted 6 to 1 against cleaning up their slums

“So you see, I have lots to talk about

So many people are talking this way about these days, besides Carol Sue. And that's a good thing. Because pretty soon she'll be talking for herself!"

Today, thousands of families all over the country are enriching their lives and adding to their reading pleasure through The National Observer.

The National Observer is published by Dow Jones & Company, the same world-wide news-gathering organization that publishes The Wall Street Journal. For two successive years, The Observer has won top national awards for distinguished news reporting.

Because The Observer is printed on high-speed newspaper presses in its four modern printing plants across the country — and because newspapers can be “made up” and printed faster than magazines — last minute stories can be filed only hours before the paper comes off the press.

You get more news — and you get more out of it. In only 18 to 32 full-size newspaper pages (printed on our own special crisp, white newsprint) you often get more reading material than in other news weeklies. The newspaper format permits not just one major “cover story,” but five or six. Inside pages are important news pages, too— there's no “let-down.” More than 50 excellent pictures open windows not only on the people, places and events in the headlines, but also such colorful sidelights as the Laguna Indians doing a traditional dance to celebrate their new electronics plant . . . or the spectacle of an elephant giving his auto-graph.

Many Enjoyable Special Features
Each week, too, The National Observer brings you more than a dozen special features that add to your enjoyment or broaden your knowledge in important areas. “The Week in Washington,” for example, can be read in a matter of minutes, yet it brings you up to date on significant happenings in Congress, the White House, Government agencies, the courts and politics. Similarly, “How's Business?” fills you in quickly on important trends in industry, the performance of the stock market, economic indicators, and company and executive highlights.

For Bridge enthusiasts, there's “Better Bridge”; for crossword fans, a really challenging puzzle; for recipe collectors, a gem or two almost every week in “Food for Thought.” And for both you and your youngsters, there's a weekly news quiz, plus “Current Events Classroom” — a column which brings you news background on such topics as the device being used to press legislation through the powerful House Rules Committee . . . the 400-year-old tradition of congressional immunity, and why it is in danger . . . why a country devaluates its currency. "A Chat With the Doctor" brings you helpful medical hints on subjects ranging from indigestion to high blood pressure. On the lighter side, "Reflections" explores random aspects of life: the "good old days" when a pocket watch was a major status symbol . . . the different, distinct types of people found using coin-operated laundries. And the whole family will enjoy the dry humor of "Grass Roots Philosophy," culled from the home-town press. ("Brush your teeth regularly with an electric toothbrush and see your electrician twice a year.")

GEMINI SPACE FLIGHT

SPECIAL COLOR The four-day Gemini VIII space flight is scheduled for launching from Cape Kennedy's Pad 19 at 8:40 A.M. Neil A. Armstrong, the United States' first civilian astronaut, and Air Force major David R. Scott will attempt man's first docking maneuvers in space, a necessary preliminary to the successful landing of a man on the moon.

The Gemini VIII lift-off will be preceded by the launching of an Agena target vehicle at 7 A.M. If the mission goes according to schedule, the Gemini VIII space capsule will rendezvous with the Agena 185 miles above the earth sometime shortly after 1:30 P.M. today. Armstrong and Scott will then begin the first of four planned attempts to attach their capsule to the target vehicle.

Major Scott will take a two-hour and 15-minute walk in space beginning at approximately 5 A.M., Wednesday morning. Eleven scientific, technological and medical experiments will also be conducted.

Splash-down is scheduled Friday morning in the Western Atlantic.

The anchor men . . . ABC: Jules Bergman. CBS: Walter Cronkite and Mike Wallace. NBC: Chet Huntley, David Brinkley and Frank McGee.

man of many parts,
keeps 'Wackiest Ship'
on an even keel

BY DICK HOBSON

Naked as a jaybird, producer Danny Arnold rolls over on his stomach on a chiropractor's slab on the fourth floor of the Thalberg Building at MGM Studio. "I invented the part for Jack Warden. He's extremely direct, totally masculine, and he's got this strong sexual magnetism."

With the doctor's fingers probing his lower lumbar region, Arnold winces in pain. "Let's take women," he continues. "They can go for the mature rough-cut type like Warden and they can go for the young clean-cut type like Gary Collins both at the same time. That's what we've got going for us."

Arnold, as writer-creator of the television version of Columbia's feature film "The Wackiest Ship in the Army," invented the role of Maj. Simon Butcher, a gruff and cynical Army veteran who couldn't care less about Navy regulations on continued the leaky old two-masted schooner in the South Pacific during World War II. In this role, Warden is perpetually hassling with Gary Collins—a callow Navy lieutenant who's the ship's captain—over who's to be in command of what.

"I'm not on the show any more except as a consultant," says Arnold as he dresses, "except they never consult me any more. Back when the show was in development, some network executive asked me if it was a comedy or a drama. I said, 'I don't know, are you a comedy or a drama?' Like human beings—like life; I think this series is simply both. That's why we went for the most versatile actor in the business. Warden can play intense melodrama, yet he plays farce with infallible timing."

Arnold gets into his car. The phone rings; it's his wife reminding him

they're having the Dick Crennas over for dinner tonight.

Back at Screen Gems, pacing before a huge naval wall chart of the South Pacific, producer Herb Hirschman stands watch at the series' helm. "The Wackiest title is our biggest mistake. It's a misnomer. The real spine of each story is the military mission. I'd call it adventure with comedy." As for The New York Times, its man Jack Gould decided to label it a "sensible farce." However you tag it, any TV comedy series that dispenses with a laugh track—and Wackiest is the only such to so dispense—can't be all bad.

"... But it is Warden who carries the show," concluded Variety after the series' debut. And Warden, these days, is to be found at Columbia Ranch in San Fernando Valley. There, in a soundstage jungle, this husky red-headed guy in battle fatigues slashes his way with a machete through the dense undergrowth of potted tropical plants and dead trees wired with plastic leaves rustling in the soft breeze from the wind machine. The big lights go out, the air-conditioning unit wheezes on, the crew moves gear to the next setup.

Warden relaxes for a moment. Yes, he was born in New Jersey. A tough part of Newark, to be exact. Yes, he does carry a plate in his leg. The result of a fouled-up parachute jump over England while in training for the D-Day invasion of Normandy. Yes, he once had a job as a bouncer at Rose-land, the big mid-Manhattan dance hall. But here's a new item: His 4-year-old son wants to be Tarzan when he grows up. The first assistant director crosses over: "We're ready to shoot, Jack."

Gary Collins, Warden's boyish co-star, was sitting this one out setside. "Jack? Without him there'd be a lot of sad faces around here. He's one big yuk—a big playful bear. The scripts are always having the two of us compete over some girl, as you probably know, and during a run-through one day we're racing pell-mell toward this chick when Jack stops short. 'Hey, wait a minute! I'm old enough to be her father,' he says. 'I'm old enough to be her father and your father!' That's the way he is. Provides a tension release for everybody. But when the camera starts rolling, he cuts it off. No games then."

It's the 1 o'clock lunch break. In Warden's dressing room cold cuts, sandwiches and beer are being served by Conrad, his British-army-officer-style bat man. Now Jack, it seems, is always playing some kind of crusty sergeant or hard-nosed petty officer, and once a sadistic dock boss. Isn't this Major Butcher role just running to type? The Warden type?

clean linen in public. And please don't touch the cucumber sandwiches. They're ordered specially for Aunt Augusta" (a speech from his role as Algernon in Oscar Wilde's "The Importance of Being Earnest" at the Margo Jones Theater).

Warden was working as a lifeguard at the indoor pool at the Park Sheraton (nee Park Central) Hotel in New York City soon after the war when he was abducted by Margo Jones and spirited off to her famous repertory theater in Dallas, where for four years he played everything from Molière and Shakespeare to the early experimental works of Williams and Inge. His was a familiar face on the tube during the "Golden Age" of live television drama on showcases identified with Kraft, Philco, Goodyear, Kaiser, G.E., Alcoa, as well as Studio One, Playhouse 90, and you-name-it. To this, add a dozen feature pictures and a leavening of the Broadway and off-Broadway theater, including musicals.

Although he's been working on the West Coast for seven years now, Warden still holds on to his old apartment above Jack Delaney's bar at Sheridan Square in Greenwich Village. Perhaps it's his life line back to the New York theater. "I could never really snip that cord," he says.

A fateful role for Warden was that of Marco, the Italian immigrant in "A View from the Bridge." Playwright Arthur Miller had cast approval, of course, and he kept calling Warden, as well as a number of other actors, back to the theater for reading after reading, over a period of six to eight weeks, an unheard-of procedure on Broadway. The director, Marty Ritt, has said he could have cast this part in 10 minutes. The strain on Warden's customarily cool composure was beginning to tell. One day he was killing time before his ninth or 10th reading by belting a few in an actors' hangout, Patsy & Carl's Theatre Bar on 45th Street. The more he contemplated how put-upon he was, the madder he got. Then, furious, he stormed into the theater, waved away the stage manager, flung down the script, and improvised his own conception of Marco for a five-to-10 minute extemporaneous scene. Miller jumped up: "That's it! That's exactly what I want!" It was the turning point in Warden's career.

Everyone with the luck to know Jack Warden personally marvels at the miming, clowning and funny lines he comes out with purely for the amusement of his cronies and pals. If you're a friend of Warden's you've got a Jonathan Winters Doll to call your own, for he has developed a whole stock company of characterizations and take-offs, and his repertoire grows and grows. Says one of his buddies, actor Val Avery: "What he does seems improvisational but actually is carefully thought through." Says Wackiest one-shot guest-star Barbara Luna: "He may be clowning around but he knows where he is at all times. You get the feeling he's been here before, maybe 150 years." Says Wackiest regular Mike Kellin: "Jack never blows his cool."

That he's trigger-fast on the comeback is legendary. For example, here's a legend: When Warden was winding up rehearsals for two one-act off-Broadway plays with co-star Shelley Winters a few seasons back, the opening had to be put off a week because Miss Winters still didn't know her lines. Warden was displeased. On Sunday afternoon he's in P. J. Clarke's on Third Avenue with a pal for a couple of drinks when in comes Shelley. "How ya doin', fellas?" says the fish-wife voice. "Let's get the hell outa here," growls Jack. "Hey, where ya goin'?" "I gotta go home study the script." "You know your lines already." "Yeah," Warden tells her,

"but I don't know your lines," and he splits.

"A lot of actors hide," Warden says. "They hide behind props, accents, even limps, every kind of thing. I believe an actor should not be afraid to expose himself on all levels. The farther I go with a part the more I try to cut down on props and bits of business to the point where finally I am exposed.

Remember Johnny Costello?

"One thing I know," he adds, "an actor is the result of his experiences. When I was young, I was a kid looking for something, and I took up boxing. Fought professionally under the name of Johnny Costello. In the ring your ego can get pretty big. It's the same as getting on stage. It's a performance. Then, when I was 16, I got kicked out of school when they found out I was boxing pro. So the next day I joined the Navy."

Warden served a three-and-a-half-year hitch (1938-41) as Fireman First Class on an old four-stack destroyer along the China Coast, assigned to the Yangtze River Patrol. Shanghai at that time was widely known as the roughest town in the world. Sailors from all the countries at war—Britain, Germany, Italy, France, the Netherlands, Japan—all got shore leave at Shanghai. "Blood Alley," a small street in the French Concession—lined with cheap cabarets, gin mills, and clip joints—got its name from its sailor brawls, free-for-alls, riots and general mayhem. "What I liked about it was the guys—being around sailors," Warden says. "Course, I was no mean street fighter in those days."

The phone rings. Major Butcher's wanted back in his jungle. "Hey, kid, why don't ya come out to Malibu this weekend? Carry on this conversation out at the beach?"

and 4-year-old Christopher—live informally in a comfortable beach house in Malibu Colony. It's always open house at the Wardens' for the retinue of actors and writers who consider Jack to be this planet's most indispensable inhabitant. "He's a dear friend." "I've learned a lot from Jack." "He's the funniest guy I ever met." "Jack loves everybody, literally." "People are always asking his advice on things." "The absolutely kindest guy in the world."

Yet, surprisingly, one of his Malibu neighbors and constant cronies, producer Matt Rapf (Ben Casey, Slattery's People) has this to say about him: "I don't think anybody really knows Jack. This is a man of depth and complexity. He draws out other people and so they think they're close to him. He uses his way of kidding around to keep people at ease, yes—but also to keep them at a distance." Mike

Kellin comes up with the same: "Jack's comical put-on is because he likes to keep his privacy."

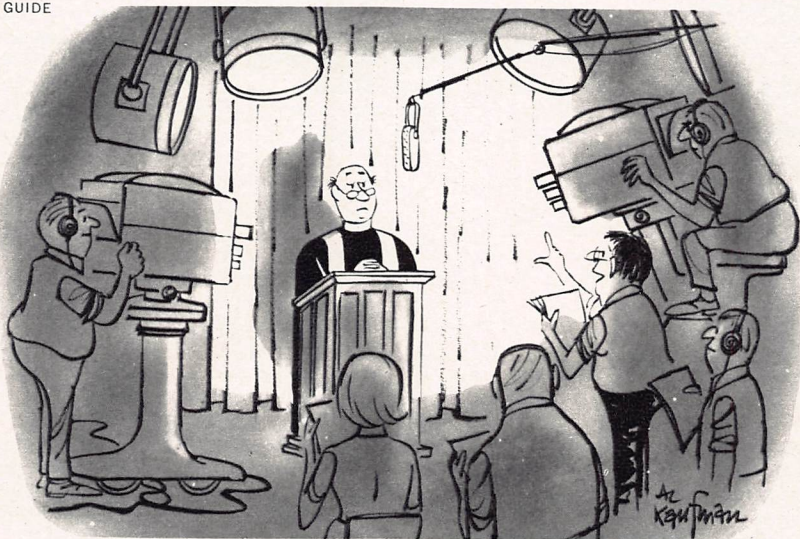

Moody on occasion

How about that, Jack? "Well, yeah, I get introverted periods. I get moody. Sometimes I just want to be by myself. I'll take a long walk along the beach."

Val Avery says he's never seen you hit anybody, but you're the only guy he's afraid of physically. What about all the physical violence in your life? Are you still a roughneck at heart? "Now I don't like violence. I am opposed to violence. It took a long time for me to sense that."

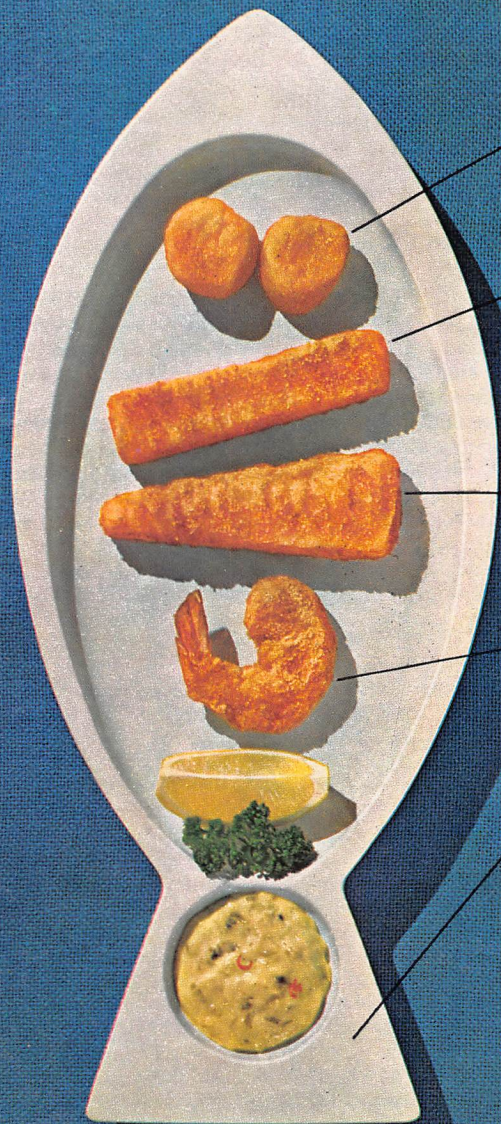

Wackiest's producer says you've got animal magnetism and the show's creator says you've got sexual magnetism. How does that grab you? "I might've heard something like that from broads. I didn't know producers cared. Makes you think."

That's the way the

Roughness in pro basketball is more subtle than it used to be—but no less bruising

BY MELVIN DURSLAG

In a game of basketball last year between the Boston Celtics and the Los Angeles Lakers, two players wound up in an interesting posture on the floor. One, Tommy Heinsohn of Boston, had the other, Walt Hazzard of Los Angeles, pinned to the wood. A foot belonging to Hazzard was a bit to the side of Heinsohn's groin, indicating a near miss. Badly stunned, Hazzard, who rises 6 feet 2 and weighs 185, had responded to a crushing wallop thrown to his head by his 6-foot-7-inch, 220-pound opponent.

Fred Schaus, the Laker coach, explained the rumble thusly: "When a man in the National Basketball Association is in the clear, going for a basket, it is pretty standard to grab him from behind and force him to try for the two points at the foul line. Well, Hazzard did this to Heinsohn, who made a big case out of it, as if he had never seen it before."

Indeed, roughhousing is no rarity in the NBA, a practice causing much concern today among the game's leaders, its followers and those who televise it across the Nation each Sunday. Actually, fist fighting isn't as common as it was, say, in the late Forties and early Fifties, when the NBA played such flourishing metropolises as Fort Wayne, Oshkosh, Sheboygan and Waterloo, Iowa. In those days, teams included fight drills in their daily practices. The boys were schooled to break up fisties by grabbing the arms of the opponent, not of their own man. The logic was, of course, that when you pinned back the arms of your teammate, you were reducing him to a sitting mallard in the event the opponent was inclined to cop a Sunday.

Most of the rough stuff in the NBA today manifests itself in ways more subtle than before. The principals go in for elbowing, pushing and shouldering. Nor are they above tripping, stepping on each other's feet, or using a discreet knee.

Things have become so rigorous in pro basketball that serious thought is being given in two areas to make life safer for the participants. First, tests are being made with protective equipment, such as hip pads, back pads and helmets, which would give the basketball player the general appearance of a football guy who walked off without his pants.

And second, discussions have taken place concerning the possibility of enlarging the basketball court maybe 10 feet in length and 5 in width. "Basketball players today," says Lou Mohs, general manager of the Lakers, "cover more ground because of the size of their strides. They wind up closer together now than ever before. I am in favor of giving them more room by making the courts larger."

Most members of the NBA contend that the last month or so of the season is the most dangerous. The exhausting travel schedule of the league tends to tire players, whose tempers shorten from fatigue. Emotions also warm up when the play-off money comes into view.

Televising basketball, as ABC is doing this season, is no artistic joy. The game moves so swiftly that it offers little opportunity for creative camera work. "You can't get too fancy in basketball," says Chet Forte, former Columbia star who is producing the NBA games for the network. "It's too fast for the isolated camera. We also tried to dramatize the game with contact microphones to pick up the voices, but had to discontinue this because the language under the boards is probably the foulest in sports."

Consistent with the general temperament of those on the floor, people in the stands at basketball matches are less than pillars of sunshine. They taunt officials, remonstrate and throw things. St. Louis fans have bombarded opposing coaches with eggs. Chris Schenkel, who is handling the NBA telecasts this year with former Boston star Bob Cousy, recalls doing commentary at a basketball game one night when a lady struck him viciously on the head with her purse, with the following results: (a) He was dazed and (b) she was taken to jail.

The prospect of football-type riches from television has led to a bullish market in the NBA. As recently as 1963, the Syracuse franchise was sold to a Philadelphia group for only $500,-

000. The following year, Baltimore went for $1,200,000. Six months later, Boston was peddled for $3,100,000. And 60 days after that, Los Angeles brought the staggering price of $5,-175,000.

Although each team in the NBA will collect but $80,000 (excluding play-offs) from network TV this season, the feeling among the new buyers seems to be that the sport distinctly is on the upswing. Attendance is climbing, partly because of increased interest in basketball on the part of women.

And why does the game appeal to the girls? Cerebral heavyweights in the NBA advance some reasons. First, basketball is comparatively uncomplicated. Second, it is played indoors, eliminating problems with their hair that beset ladies at outdoor events. Third, the show is fast. It seldom lasts more than two hours, which means that a night basketball outing usually involves such post-game activity as supper or dancing. After all, what cad would take a lady home at 10 o'clock? And if she is his wife, what cad would dare to?

Those who administrate pro basketball are naturally delighted by the game's growing popularity but can see no reason for roughness in the sport to abate, mainly because the quality of the players keeps improving. The skillful performers in the NBA are so tall and have so many cunning moves that they can't possibly be covered legally. Hence, the opposition must resort to fouls.

Of course, a man who fouls must also take his chances with the guy he roughs up. And, as Walt Hazzard discovered, this isn't always healthy.

CAPRICE YEUDLEMAN

LIKE THIS

When you write about Nina Wayne, the temptation is to write like this. Not because Nina, who plays Caprice Yeudleman in NBC's Camp Runamuck, looks like this. She looks LIKE THIS. It's just that she sounds like this.

Her whole family—Dad, Mother and sister Carol—have little voices. Once when Nina returned home from visiting an aunt, her mother said, "You're shouting," which is difficult to imagine. When she gets a long-distance call, the operator usually says, "Will you put your mother on, please?"

Usually, upon meeting her, people wonder whether she is for real—a question which has yet to be satisfactorily answered. She lives at Malibu, far from the bright lights of Hollywood—and of Las Vegas and New York, where she got her indoctrination in show business. She has said that she likes her one-bedroom apartment overlooking the ocean because it is "away from everything." But someone who knows her says, "She'd be away from everything any place."

Unlike most starlets, she cares little about clothes and when she came to Hollywood had only one dress, three pairs of slacks and two sweaters. For a picture-taking session, she wore a shirt borrowed from John Barrymore Jr., with whom she has been, as they say, romantically linked.

Being without clothes is an integral part of the legend of Nina Wayne, in Las Vegas and New York, continued but it all began in Chicago on Sept. 18, 1943, a date Nina will probably begin lying about in another five or six years.

Difficult as it may be to believe today, Nina was a delicate child who, in addition to being pigeon-toed, had weak ankles and skinny legs. Her sister was similarly afflicted. Finally they sought the advice of their uncle, a doctor.

Ice-skating regimen

Uncle put the two Wayne girls on a stiff regimen of ice-skating. Eventually they became so adept that they joined the "Ice Capades." Nina was only 15 at the time. For two years, the sisters toured the country. Nina's skating career reached some sort of climax one night at Madison Square Garden when she fell down right in front of Governor Rockefeller. The Wayne sisters' skating act finally broke up when Nina's sister fell and injured her knee.

After leaving the "Ice Capades," Nina became a show girl and dancer at Las Vegas, then went to New York, where she became a model by day and a dancer by night. When asked what her parents thought of her career, she replied, "They didn't say anything when they saw me in Las Vegas, but after they came to the Latin Quarter, my mother said, 'Daddy and I would prefer that you wear a few more beads.'"

When Van Johnson was appearing at the Latin Quarter, he chose Nina to work in a specialty number with him. As a result of this, she was chosen to be a guest on The Tonight Show with Johnny Carson. There, she says, "I just talked." But that was enough. Carson recalls her "kind of coo-coo way of speaking" and characterizes her comedy style as "early idiot." One of his—and her—viewers that night a year ago last fall was David Swift, a producer who was gathering a cast for a new television show. Nina, the tall (5-foot-9) show girl with the tiny voice, was exactly what he was looking for: "She has the voice of a grape coming out of a banana." Two days later Nina was in Hollywood, making the pilot film for Camp Runamuck.

When Mike Frankovich, vice president of Columbia Pictures, saw her, he said, "She's not for real," and put her under contract for motion pictures as well as for the new TV show.

Today, in addition to working in television, Nina takes daily acting lessons in the class which Columbia Studios has for its contract players. In her small spare time, she goes mountain climbing in the desert—"not very high mountains, though." She does not smoke or drink and is a strict vegetarian—"I don't believe in killing animals," she says. Like most young women in Hollywood, she wants someday to be a Big Star.

Keep that voice small

Nina Wayne is working hard to become a good actress. But her teachers are under strict instructions from the studio not to tamper with her voice—they want to keep it small. David Swift says, "She has almost an armor of naïveté, translated directly without being filtered." Johnny Carson says, "I'm not sure if she's for real or a put-on. I have my suspicions that it's a calculated naïveté." When Nina appeared on The Tonight Show, Carson asked her, "How does it feel to work without any clothes on?" Nina answered, "Naked."

After all, that's the way Marilyn Monroe got her start, and Nina Wayne has a Monroe quality about her, without the blonde brassiness. Thus, although Camp Runamuck will not be around much longer—its ratings have been consistently low—Nina will probably be heard from again, but very quietly.
